Investment process

Our high conviction approach has resulted in a portfolio of 30-40 global stocks. The focus is to own companies with long-term sustainable growth at attractive prices versus their underlying value and with very limited dependence on economic outlooks. We will target companies that can provide sustainable high rates of return, favourable exposure to structural growth trends that benefit from long-term themes. Importantly, the companies will also offer products, services and solutions that are aligned to achieving a more sustainable and lower-carbon world. We exclude tobacco, alcohol, controversial weapons, companies with low ESG scores and those with the highest CO₂ emission intensity.

We have a systematic approach to position sizing and rebalancing, based on weighted upside, drawdown risk and end market correlation.

Responsible investing and active engagement

We believe that responsible investing can strengthen long-term returns, through mitigating risks and unearthing investment opportunities. This is because, in our view, ESG factors are financially material and are currently not being priced correctly, as markets lack the information necessary to do so.

The fund utilises LGIM’s global research and engagement platform, to stress-test company resiliency and provide forward-looking assessments of ESG performance. Alongside the activities of LGIM’s Investment Stewardship team, the platform facilitates active engagement with investee companies in order to drive positive change.

Fundamental analysis

Our experienced equity research team undertakes comprehensive bottom-up analysis into companies, incorporating the long-term views, fundamental sector and company analysis, and material ESG factors, alongside a strict valuation discipline. This evidence-based approach allows us to assess companies’ growth prospects.

Our belief is that fundamental, bottom-up evaluation requires deep industry research, high company engagement and an assessment of financially material ESG factors by sector and company.

We believe in what we do – in addition to voicing our active engagement with companies, we are invested alongside our investors and aligned on performance objectives.
